MARKET COMMENTARY

The Aussie market had a negative day as global funds were selling out of Australia to defend US after the Venezuela cosplay. White House struggled to answer basic questions about their cosplay. It looks like they have no idea what will happen next. Trump is claiming that they control Venezuela while everyone is claiming their blockade means the same government will have to deal with them. US is now saying that Oil companies may need subsidies to fix Venezuelan infrastructure. We are in an alternative world where US is going to help private companies steal assets from a sovereign country but does not have the money to fix their own infrastructure problems. Attacks on South American countries, Canada and Greenland are getting attacks from White House but that is expected when they are deflecting from not releasing Epstein files and economic mess. BSL gets a bid as commodities run wild. Inflation on fire. It may be different this time!

CNBC – Geopolitics > China and other foreign governments have sharply criticized the U.S.'s removal of Venezuelan leader Nicolás Maduro, but experts are split on whether the Trump administration's actions could set the table for President Xi Jinping to make a move on Taiwan. U.S. forces captured Maduro and his wife, Cilia Flores, on Jan. 3 and brought them to New York on drug and terrorism charges in a move with little modern precedent. While allies of President Donald Trump cheered the ouster of the Venezuelan leader, critics worried about the example it set, particularly as China takes an increasingly aggressive posture. "If Donald Trump can walk into a country and take it over ... then why is Putin wrong about Ukraine, and why is China not entitled to take over Taiwan?" David Roche of Quantum Strategy told CNBC. Other experts are unconvinced. In an appearance on CNBC on Monday, Carlos Gutierrez, a former U.S. Secretary of Commerce under President George W. Bush, characterized China's relationship with Venezuela as a "tactical convenience," and one unlikely to catalyze military action in East Asia. They have to do that, but I don't see any tangible significant action on China's behalf," he continued. The U.S. has asserted what it calls a "Trump Corollary" in its recently released National Security Strategy, reviving the Monroe Doctrine of the 1820s, where the U.S. had a sphere of influence over the Western Hemisphere. A sphere of influence refers to a region where a powerful country seeks to dominate political, military or economic decisions without formally annexing territory. The concept echoes the Roosevelt Corollary, which historically justified U.S. intervention in Latin America. A statement from United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said that he was "deeply concerned that the rules of international law have not been respected," calling the developments in Venezuela a "dangerous precedent." Roche warned the action could create unintended consequences: "On one hand, you've created a series of threats, and on the other, you've created a series of permissions to every dictatorial, autocratic regime, who wants to act to take over territory which is not currently within its ambit."

Historically, 75% of retail investors have experienced losses during positive market periods. Investors are now facing market cycles that are unprecedented in their lifetime, making risk management a crucial aspect of investing. Going forward, the trend towards active investing is reemerging as investors seek quality, relative value, profitability, and dividends. To navigate this new paradigm, it's important to have an active investment strategy that is flexible and adaptable to changing market conditions!

Net borrowing of consumer credit by individuals in the UK rose to £2.1 billion in November 2025 from an upwardly revised £1.7 billion in the previous month and well above market forecasts of £1.1 billion. It was the highest reading since November 2023, as net borrowing through credit cards went up to £1.0 billion in November from £0.7 billion in October. Net borrowing through other forms of consumer credit, such as car dealership finance and personal loans, slightly increased to £1.1 billion in November from £1.0 billion. The annual growth rate for all consumer credit rose to 8.1% in November, from 7.5% in the previous month. Over the same period, the annual growth rate for credit card borrowing increased to 12.1% from 10.9%, the highest since January 2024 (12.5%), while the annual growth rate for other forms of consumer credit increased to 6.3% from 6.0%, the highest since September 2024 (6.6%).

The ISM Manufacturing PMI for the US fell for a third consecutive month to 47.9 in December 2025, the lowest level since October 2024, compared to 48.2 in November and forecasts of 48.3. The reading showed the US manufacturing activity contracted at a faster rate, led by pullbacks in production (51 vs 51.4) and inventories (45.2 vs 48.9), following increases in November, pointing to recent economic uncertainty in manufacturing. Also, price pressures remained elevated (58.5 vs 58.5). On the other hand, improvements in new orders (47.7 vs 47.4), backlog of orders (45.8 vs 44) and new export orders (46.8 vs 46.2) and the customers' inventories index remaining in 'too low' territory (43.3 vs 44.7) are positive signs for December, but several consecutive months of gains in these indicators are necessary for a longer-term recovery. In addition, employment contracted at a slower pace (44.9 vs 44).

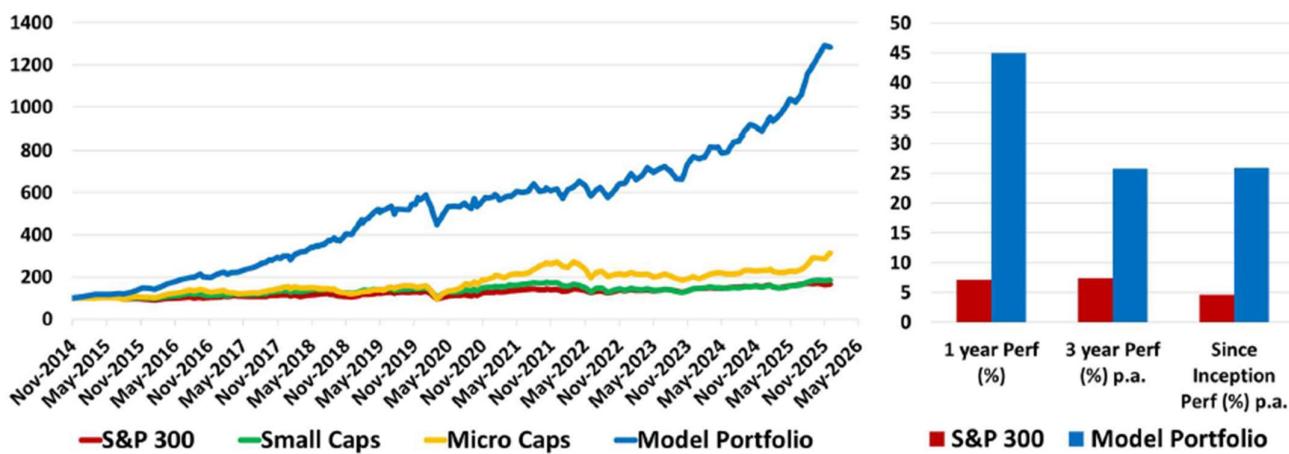

The HSBC India Services PMI was revised lower to 58.0 in December 2025 from a preliminary estimate of 59.1 and a final reading of 59.8 in November, coming in below market forecasts of 59.3. The latest figure marked the softest expansion in the services sector since January, as new business and output eased to 11-month lows. However, new export orders rose at a marked pace, and one that was quicker than in November. Employment fell for the first time since May, though only marginally, as the vast majority of companies reported no change since November. On the price front, input cost inflation accelerated from November but remained among the softest in over five years. Meanwhile, selling prices rose slightly, recording one of the weakest increases in around two years. Looking ahead, business sentiment weakened to its lowest level in nearly three and a half years.

The S&P Global Singapore PMI slipped to 54.1 in December 2025 from 55.4 in the previous month, marking the lowest reading since August. Still, the latest result signaled the 11th straight month of growth in private sector activity, staying above the long-run trend. Both Output and new orders softened but remained firm, while employment fell fractionally for the first time since August, largely due to resignations. Purchasing activity strengthened, driving a solid build-up of inventories as supply chains stabilized after four months of delays. Simultaneously, margin pressures eased: output prices increased after November's dip, and input cost inflation moderated. Supply chain efficiency improved, further supporting stock accumulation. Lastly, confidence rose above the series average, buoyed by expectations of stronger output in 2026 on growth plans and new product launches.

The S&P Global Australia Services PMI Business Activity Index came at 51.1 in December, down from 52.8 in November, indicating slower expansion in the service sector if confirmed, according to final readings. The moderation reflected weaker services and new business growth amid heightened competition, with new orders decelerating while employment increased at a quicker pace as firms hired to manage workloads. Export demand for services softened, producing a more modest rise in new export business than in November. Business confidence improved to its highest since June. On the cost side, input price inflation rose at a quicker rate due to higher energy, wage and material expenses, while selling price inflation picked up and rose to a three-month high.
