MARKET COMMENTARY

The Aussie market had a negative day to finish the week and had a negative week overall. The real catalyst was news leak pushing a hawkish Kevin Warsh as the betting odds favorite. The obvious problem is that White House has been campaigning all of the past year that Powell is not cutting rates fast enough and it should be below 1%. Unless there is a deal, Warsh is not the person for that. Markets pushed up bond yields and USD. That naturally hit all commodities. All the hot money ran out of commodities and that dragged the market lower. We are going into the weekend with government shutdown risk, Iran attack risk, Cuba blockade risk and new Fed chair risk. These are on top of the usual reality show mess that already exists in the US. White House now does citizenship and tariff on call. US credibility is falling to levels seen only at the "Milania" movie. Given the social unrest and ICE killings, government shutdown on the weekend is nearly certain. Hence distractions like Iran and Cuba move are likely. US Fed chair announcement is another moving piece to distract from the policy failures. Anything can happen...buckle up. It may be different this time!

CNBC – US Fed Chief > President Donald Trump said Thursday that he will be naming his pick Friday for the new Federal Reserve chair. Speaking at the premiere for "Melania," the film about first lady Melania Trump, the president said a process that began last summer of finding his pick to succeed current Chair Jerome Powell is about to end. "I'll be announcing the Fed chair tomorrow morning," Trump said. Asked if he had actually settled on a choice, he replied, "I do, I better, otherwise I have to go to work very quickly." The process for deciding on Powell's replacement began in September with an 11-candidate field that included past and current Fed officials, economists and Wall Street investment professionals. Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent screened the qualifying candidates, whittling the list down to five and then four. The final four is believed to be former Fed Governor Kevin Warsh, National Economic Council Director Kevin Hassett, current Fed Governor Christopher Waller and BlackRock chief investment officer for fixed income Rick Rieder. Prediction markets have been betting on who gets the job. Hassett had been the leader for some time, then Warsh and for the past several days Rieder. However, that flipped Thursday evening, with Kalshi now putting Warsh as a prohibitive 80% favorite. Trump added that the pick is "somebody that could have been there a few years ago." Warsh is known to have been in the running back in 2017 when Trump decided to nominate Powell. An administration source told CNBC that Warsh was at the White House on Thursday. However, a White House official dismissed speculation. "President Trump will make an announcement about his pick for the Federal Reserve at the appropriate juncture. Any and all reporting on the Federal Reserve Chairman nominations process until then is a waste of everyone's time," said White House spokesman Kush Desai. For his part, Powell balked at questions over whether he will stay on after his term as chair expires in May. Powell has the option of serving out the remaining two years on his governor's term.

Historically, 75% of retail investors have experienced losses during positive market periods. Investors are now facing market cycles that are unprecedented in their lifetime, making risk management a crucial aspect of investing. Going forward, the trend towards active investing is reemerging as investors seek quality, relative value, profitability, and dividends. To navigate this new paradigm, it's important to have an active investment strategy that is flexible and adaptable to changing market conditions!

Japan's industrial production edged down 0.1% month-over-month in December 2025, much slower than a 2.7% drop in the previous month and less than market forecasts of a 0.4% decline, flash data showed. However, it marked the second straight month of decrease, reflecting year-end production adjustments. Industries that mainly contributed to the fall were production machinery (-1.9% vs 5.1% in November), chemicals, excluding inorganic, organic chemicals, and medicine (-2.9% vs -2.1%), and pulp, paper and paper products (-4.1% vs -1.5%). In contrast, output grew for general-purpose and business-oriented machinery (7.3% vs -0.3%), electrical machinery, and information and communication electronics equipment (2.7% vs -10.1%), motor vehicles (1.4% vs -6.7%). On an annual basis, production expanded 2.6%, reversing a 2.2% fall in November and marking the strongest pace in three months.

Retail sales in Japan unexpectedly dropped 0.9% year-on-year in December 2025, reversing an upwardly revised 1.1% increase in the previous month and defying market expectations of a 0.7% rise. This marked the first decline in retail turnover since August, reflecting that households had already met their year-end needs in the previous month, supported by rising wages. Sales decreased for clothing and personal goods (-11.6%), fuel (-10.8%), non-store retailers (-5.8%), department stores (-0.5%), and food and beverages (-0.4%). By contrast, retail trade increased for other retail categories (6.1%), automobiles (5.9%), machinery and equipment (5.9%), and cosmetics (0.1%). On a monthly basis, retail sales fell 2.0% in December after an upwardly revised 0.7% gain in November, marking the first monthly decline in four months.

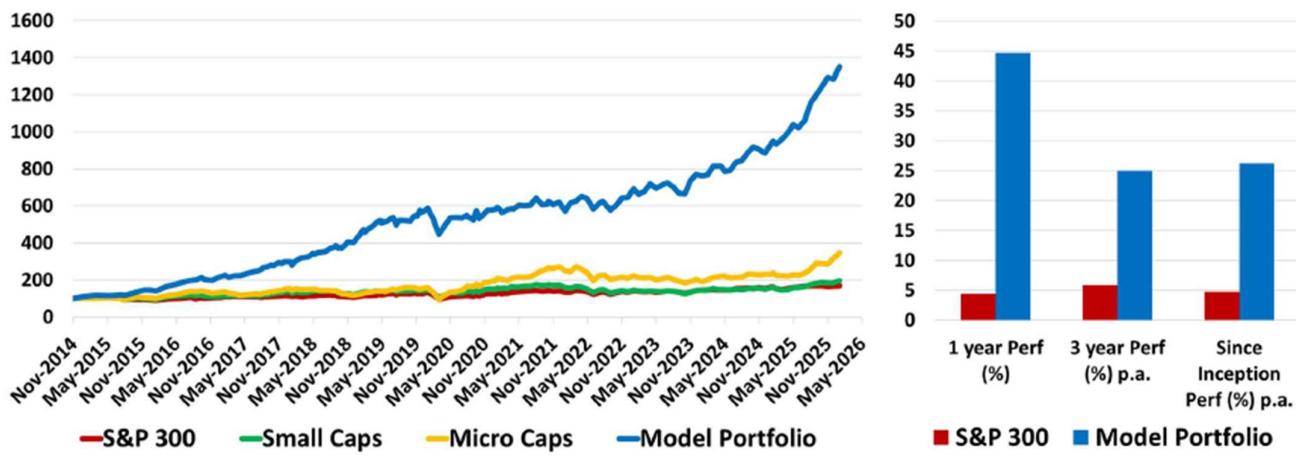

Japan's unemployment rate held at 2.6% in December 2025, unchanged for a fourth consecutive month and in line with market expectations. The figure remained the highest since July 2024, as the number of unemployed grew by 50 thousand to 1.86 million. Meanwhile, employment fell by 50 thousand to 68.46 million, while the labor force dropped 50 thousand to 70.31 million. The number of people outside the labor force increased by 50 thousand to 39.27 million. On a non-seasonally adjusted basis, the labor force participation rate stood at 63.9%, down from 64.1% November but up from 63.4% a year earlier. Meanwhile, the jobs-to-applicants ratio edged up to 1.19 from a near three-year low in the prior two months, slightly above the expected 1.18.

Australia's final demand Producer Price Index (PPI) increased 0.8% quarter-on-quarter in Q4 2025, slowing from a 1.0% rise in the previous quarter and coming in softer than market estimates of a 1.1% increase. It marked the 22nd consecutive quarter of producer inflation, though it eased from the fastest pace since Q3 2024 recorded in Q3, with sustained demand in the residential property sector remaining a key contributor to growth. Property operators led the rise (0.9%), supported by strong demand and rising rents for residential properties. At the same time, residential building construction grew 1.3%, driven by a modest increase in demand for property. On an annual basis, producer prices climbed 3.5% in Q4, the same pace as in Q3.

Australia's private sector credit rose 0.8% month-on-month in December 2025, exceeding market expectations of 0.6% and accelerating from a 0.6% growth in the previous month. The latest figure marked the highest increase since June 2022, as credit growth quickened for both housing (0.7% vs 0.6% in November) and business (1.0% vs 0.9%). At the same time, personal credit rebounded strongly (0.5% vs -0.6%). On an annual basis, private credit expanded 7.7%, up from 7.4% in the preceding two months and marking the fastest pace in five years, underscoring sustained demand for credit despite a still-restrictive interest-rate environment. Housing Credit in Australia increased to 0.70 percent in December from 0.60 percent in November of 2025. Housing Credit in Australia averaged 0.90 percent from 1976 until 2025, reaching an all time high of 3 percent in April of 1980 and a record low of -0.40 percent in July of 1984.
